

Grandma,

A terrible disease stole your memory,
You no longer even knew me,
There are so many things
I would've liked to ask you,
80 plus years of stories in your past,
I decided to look through your photographs,
And I found myself reminiscing for you,
Strolling down your Memory Lane,
Faces of people that I don't know their name,
Each still image holds a bit of your history,
How I wish you could tell me,
But I know that now you have passed from this place,
To Heaven above and seen God face to face,
And one day when we meet once more,
You will be able to tell me all the stories your time on earth didn't allow for...
